Cus0 agrees with the Venice Edition of Liec.tenstein, which is believed to have been translated from an Arabic MS. This leads one to infer that Cusa derived the places of his stars also from the Arabic. There are some errors in the Catalogue which are readily explained on the supposition of confounding the Arabic characters. For example: --The latitude of Sirius is given as 0290 500 instead of 090 105, or the very probable error of confounding the o with the 0 l . The latitude of the northern of the Aselli is given as 10 400 for 0 405, or a mistake of 0 i for Oz- . . The longitudes are those of Ptolemy increased by 01. The Epoch is not given in the above edition. but if it be.12 120 as asserted by Riccioli. then the amount of preces-on a-ed...
