Brand New Book ***** Print on Demand *****.Excerpt from Inter-America, Vol. 1 of 1: October, 1917 (After a brief characterization of the principal works of Dario, the author analyzes the poet and his poetry, and he gives a number of citations of verse, both to illustrate its quality and to justify his views regarding it.) Ruben Dario has a reputation among those of his kind, not only as an eminent poet, the prince of the poets of the Spanish language, but also as the first, the most complete, the leading and most interesting man of letters of contemporary Spanish-American literature. In the continental press, as also in the criticism of Spain, the supreme esthete of Los raros is spoken of with respect, and the new generation, fascinated by the grandeur of his star, chants, in a noisy riot of neophytes, hymns of joy and affection to him, as if in the presence of a new Homer. For splendor, unexpectedness of imagery, excellence of form, vigor of vocabulary, force and depth of thought, and for the originality of his genius and the singularity of his...
