Excerpt: .and a well-planned concentration on any given point may be badly marred, if not altogether ruined, by unforeseen delay. Whether for this reason, or because they did not wish to enter into any organised campaign, the Indian Government evidently did not care to employ the converging column system against the Vaziris, but preferred to adopt the plan of a four-fold raid, the entire success of which will doubtless lead to future developments in the same direction. Four columns under the control of Brigadier-General Denning--who did excellent work against the Mohmands during the Frontier risings--were ordered to enter the Mahsud country without guns or animal transport, carrying their own food and ammunition. These columns were from 900 to 1,500 strong, and composed largely of Sikhs and Punjab Infantry, a special feature being the co-operation of a number of the new tribal Militia, on whom the safeguarding of...
